WORK OF THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

It will generally be conceded that the work of the Democratic county convention yesterday was well done. It was most important that it should be well done. Just what the effect of fusion with the Populists will be, cannot at this time be said; the convention, which considered the matter thoroughly, deemed it wise, and Democratic generally will be centent to accept the convention's pidgment.

The nominees are all well and favorably known to the community, and will be heartly endersed by both parties to the fusion. They will also command the confidence of the voters. In the nomination of the county ticker, the selectmen and county attorney, the convention could have done no better. While the voters are interested in all the offices, still they were specially anxious concerning these, as they have felt that their financial interests are more at stake than any other, and that they needed the greatest care. We have singled these out for special mention because they were the ones a beat which most interest centered, and not by way of comparison. All the nominations are equally excellent and deserving of support. The delegates to the convention are to be congratulated which most interest to be congratulated which most interest to be congratulated when the convention are to be congratulated.

It will generally be conceded that the work is should be a surface of the sum of the convention and feeling of opponents. It is not a trace of what is commently called 'magnetism' in it. Men are moved by what the saying disappointment. His voice is an anazing di
